

United States Court of Appeals
For the Eighth Circuit

No. 19-1824

United States of America,

Plaintiff - Appellee,

v.

Bradley E. Turner,

Defendant - Appellant.

Appeal from United States District Court for the Southern District of Iowa - Davenport

Submitted: September 4, 2019

Filed: September 9, 2019

[Unpublished]

Before COLLTON, ERICKSON, and GRASZ, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM.

Bradley Turner appeals after the district court¹ revoked his supervised release and sentenced him within the calculated Guidelines range. His counsel has filed a brief challenging the reasonableness of the sentence and seeking to withdraw.

We conclude that the district court imposed a substantively reasonable revocation sentence, as there is no indication that the court overlooked a relevant factor, gave significant weight to an improper or irrelevant factor, or committed a clear error of judgment in weighing the relevant factors. See United States v. McGhee, 869 F.3d 703, 705 (8th Cir. 2017) (per curiam) (substantive reasonableness of revocation sentence is reviewed under same abuse-of-discretion standard applied to initial sentencing decisions); United States v. Feemster, 572 F.3d 455, 461–62 (8th Cir. 2009) (en banc) (discussing substantive reasonableness). Accordingly, we affirm the judgment, and we grant counsel permission to withdraw.

¹The Honorable Stephanie M. Rose, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Iowa.