Before GRUENDER, GRASZ, and KOBES, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM.

Charles Carter appeals after the district court¹ revoked his supervised release and sentenced him to 24 months in prison and 1 year of supervised release. His counsel has moved to withdraw, and has filed a brief arguing that the revocation sentence is substantively unreasonable.

Upon careful review, we conclude that Carter's sentence was not unreasonable, as there is no indication that the district court overlooked a relevant factor, gave significant weight to an improper or irrelevant factor, or committed a clear error of judgment in weighing the relevant factors. See United States v. Miller, 557 F.3d 910, 914 (8th Cir. 2009) (reviewing the district court's decision to revoke supervised release for abuse of discretion); United States v. Larison, 432 F.3d 921, 923 (8th Cir. 2006) (explaining that a revocation sentence may be unreasonable if the district court fails to consider a relevant 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factor, gives significant weight to an improper or irrelevant factor, or commits a clear error of judgment); United States v. White Face, 383 F.3d 733, 740 (8th Cir. 2004) (stating that a district court need not mechanically list every § 3553(a) factor when sentencing a defendant upon revocation; all that is required is consideration of relevant matters and some reason for the court's decision).

Accordingly, we grant counsel's motion to withdraw, and affirm.
