withdraw and has filed a brief challenging the substantive reasonableness of the sentence. After careful review, we conclude that the district court did not abuse its discretion, as Hudson admitted to violating the conditions of his release, and the revocation sentence is within the statutory maximum. See United States v. Miller, 557 F.3d 910, 914, 916 (8th Cir. 2009) (standard of review; single violation enough to revoke supervised release); see also 18 U.S.C. § 3583(e)(3) (maximum revocation prison term is 2 years if underlying offense is Class C felony).

Accordingly, we grant counsel's motion to withdraw and affirm the judgment.
