PER CURIAM.

In these consolidated appeals, Kevin Adams appeals after the district court<sup>1</sup> revoked his supervised release and sentenced him to 22 months in prison and 1 year of supervised release, with special conditions. His counsel has moved to withdraw and has filed a brief challenging the substantive reasonableness of the sentences.

Having carefully reviewed the record, we conclude that Adams's sentences were not unreasonable, as there is no indication that the district court failed to consider the relevant factors, gave significant weight to an improper or irrelevant factor, or committed a clear error of judgment in weighing the relevant factors. See United States v. Larison, 432 F.3d 921, 923 (8th Cir. 2006) (sentence may be unreasonable if district court fails to consider relevant factor, gives significant weight to improper factor, or commits clear error of judgment); United States v. Beckwith, 57 F.4th 630, 632-33 (8th Cir. 2023) (per curiam) (court properly considered criminal history and characteristics; revocation sentences within Guidelines range are accorded a presumption of substantive reasonableness on appeal).

Accordingly, we affirm, and we grant counsel's motion to withdraw.
